Foreword

The National Population and Housing Census (NPHC) is the only source that consistently provides demographic and housing data down to the Ward level—the lowest administrative unit. To meet the needs of a broad range of users, brief explanations of the data are included in our reports. Over the years, the National Statistics Office (NSO) has focused not only on statistical reports but also on analytical publications that serve a wide audience within and outside the country. The production and dissemination of quality statistics are not merely public goods but important national resources in the data and information age.

The NSO is committed to serving as the central provider of high-quality official statistics to support informed decision-making. In the past, the former Central Bureau of Statistics (CBS) published population monographs after releasing statistical results. This time, however, 21 thematic reports have already been prepared and published by the NSO, each focusing on key sectors of the national development plan.

I am pleased to present this landmark publication, the Population Atlas of Nepal. While tables and graphs provide essential statistical details, maps offer a clear and immediate understanding of spatial patterns and regional disparities. The Atlas presents a wide range of key census indicators covering housing and household amenities, drinking water and sanitation, migration, literacy and school attendance, economic activity, and demographic and social characteristics such as CBR, CDR, IMR, TFR, U5MR, dependency ratio, demographic dividend and marital status. By visualising these indicators across geographical boundaries, the Atlas provides an accessible and powerful resource for planners, policymakers and local governments to identify disparities, target resources and formulate evidence-based, spatially informed development strategies. I am confident that these maps and findings will guide decision-makers across all levels of government in shaping inclusive development strategies for a more prosperous and sustainable future.

I would like to specifically commend the entire team of the Population Section for their tireless efforts in generating data, preparing maps, providing technical support, and thoroughly reviewing the Atlas draft. The Head of the Social Statistics Division at NSO played a crucial role in coordinating and leading these activities, and I greatly appreciate his leadership and contributions. I also gratefully acknowledge the valuable technical support provided by the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) in generating the thematic maps and assisting with the layout design of this Atlas.

Lastly, I encourage constructive feedback from our users to improve future editions of this report.

HOUSING AND HOUSEHOLDS

2.1 Percentage of Households Living in Permanent (Pakki) Houses, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the proportion of households residing in permanent (Pakki) housing units within a local level. A permanent (Pakki) housing unit is defined as a dwelling in which both the walls and roof are constructed primarily from durable and permanent construction materials, including cement, bonded brick, concrete, stone, slate, tile, or galvanized iron (GI) sheets.

The indicator is calculated as the percentage of households living in such permanent housing units relative to the total number of households in the respective local level.

2.2 Percentage of Households Living in Own House, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the proportion of households residing in owner-occupied housing units within a local level. A household is considered to be living in its own house when the dwelling is owned by the household or by one or more of its members.

The indicator is calculated as the percentage of households residing in their own house relative to the total number of households in the respective local level.

POPULATION DYNAMICS

3.1 Annual Population Growth Rate, 2011–2021, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the average annual rate of population growth in a local level between the 2011 and 2021 population censuses. It measures the annual percentage change in the population over the intercensal period.

The indicator is calculated as the annualized percentage change in population between the 2011 and 2021 censuses, based on the population at the beginning and end of the intercensal period.

3.2 Percentage Change in Population 2011-2021, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the percentage change in the population of a local level between the 2011 and 2021 population censuses. It measures the relative increase or decrease in population over the intercensal period.

The indicator is calculated as the absolute change in population between the 2021 and 2011 censuses divided by the population in 2011, multiplied by 100.

3.3 Population Density, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the number of persons residing per unit of land area within a local level. It measures the concentration of population in relation to the geographical area of the respective local level.

The indicator is calculated by dividing the total population of the local level by its total land area, and is generally expressed as the number of persons per square kilometre (persons/km^2).

3.9 International Migration: Percentage of Population Currently Immigrated in the Last 5 Years Before 2021 Census, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the proportion of the population currently residing in a local level who had immigrated to Nepal during the five years preceding the 2021 Population and Housing Census. It measures the share of the population who were residing in the respective local level at the time of the census and had arrived in Nepal within the five-year period before the census.

The indicator is calculated as the percentage of persons who immigrated to Nepal during the five years preceding the 2021 Census relative to the total population residing in the respective local level.

DEMOGRAPHIC CHARACTERISTICS

4.1 Total Dependency Ratio, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the ratio of the dependent-age population to the working-age population within a local level, expressed as a percentage. The working-age population is defined as persons aged 15–59 years, while the dependent-age population comprises persons aged 0–14 years and 60 years and above.

The indicator is calculated by dividing the dependent-age population by the working-age population and multiplying by 100. It provides a broad measure of the potential age-related dependency burden within the population.

4.2 Child Dependency Ratio, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the ratio of the child population to the working-age population within a local level, expressed as a percentage. The child population is defined as persons aged 0–14 years, while the working-age population comprises persons aged 15–59 years.

The indicator is calculated by dividing the population aged 0–14 years by the population aged 15–59 years and multiplying by 100. It provides a measure of the potential dependency of children on the working-age population.

4.3 Old Age Dependency Ratio, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the ratio of the population aged 60 years and above to the working-age population aged 15–59 years within a local level, expressed as a percentage. The population aged 60 years and above is considered the old-age dependent population, while persons aged 15–59 years are considered the working-age population.

The indicator is calculated by dividing the population aged 60 years and above by the population aged 15–59 years and multiplying by 100. It provides a measure of the potential dependency burden associated with the older population.

4.8 Total Fertility Rate, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the average number of children a woman would give birth to over her reproductive lifetime, based on the age-specific fertility rates prevailing in a local level. It measures the level of fertility among women of reproductive ageof 15–49 years.

The indicator is calculated as the sum of the age-specific fertility rates for women aged 15–49 years, multiplied by the length of the age intervals. It is expressed as the average number of children per woman.

4.9 Adolescent Fertility Rate, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the number of live births occurring to women aged 15–19 years per 1,000 women in the same age group within a local level. It measures the level of fertility among adolescent women aged 15–19 years.

The indicator is calculated by dividing the number of live births to women aged 15–19 years by the number of women aged 15–19 years and multiplying by 1,000. It is expressed as the number of live births per 1,000 women aged 15–19 years.

4.10 Crude Death Rate, by Local Level

This indicator refers to the number of deaths occurring in a population per 1,000 population within a local level during one year. It measures the overall level of mortality in the population without adjusting for differences in age or sex composition.

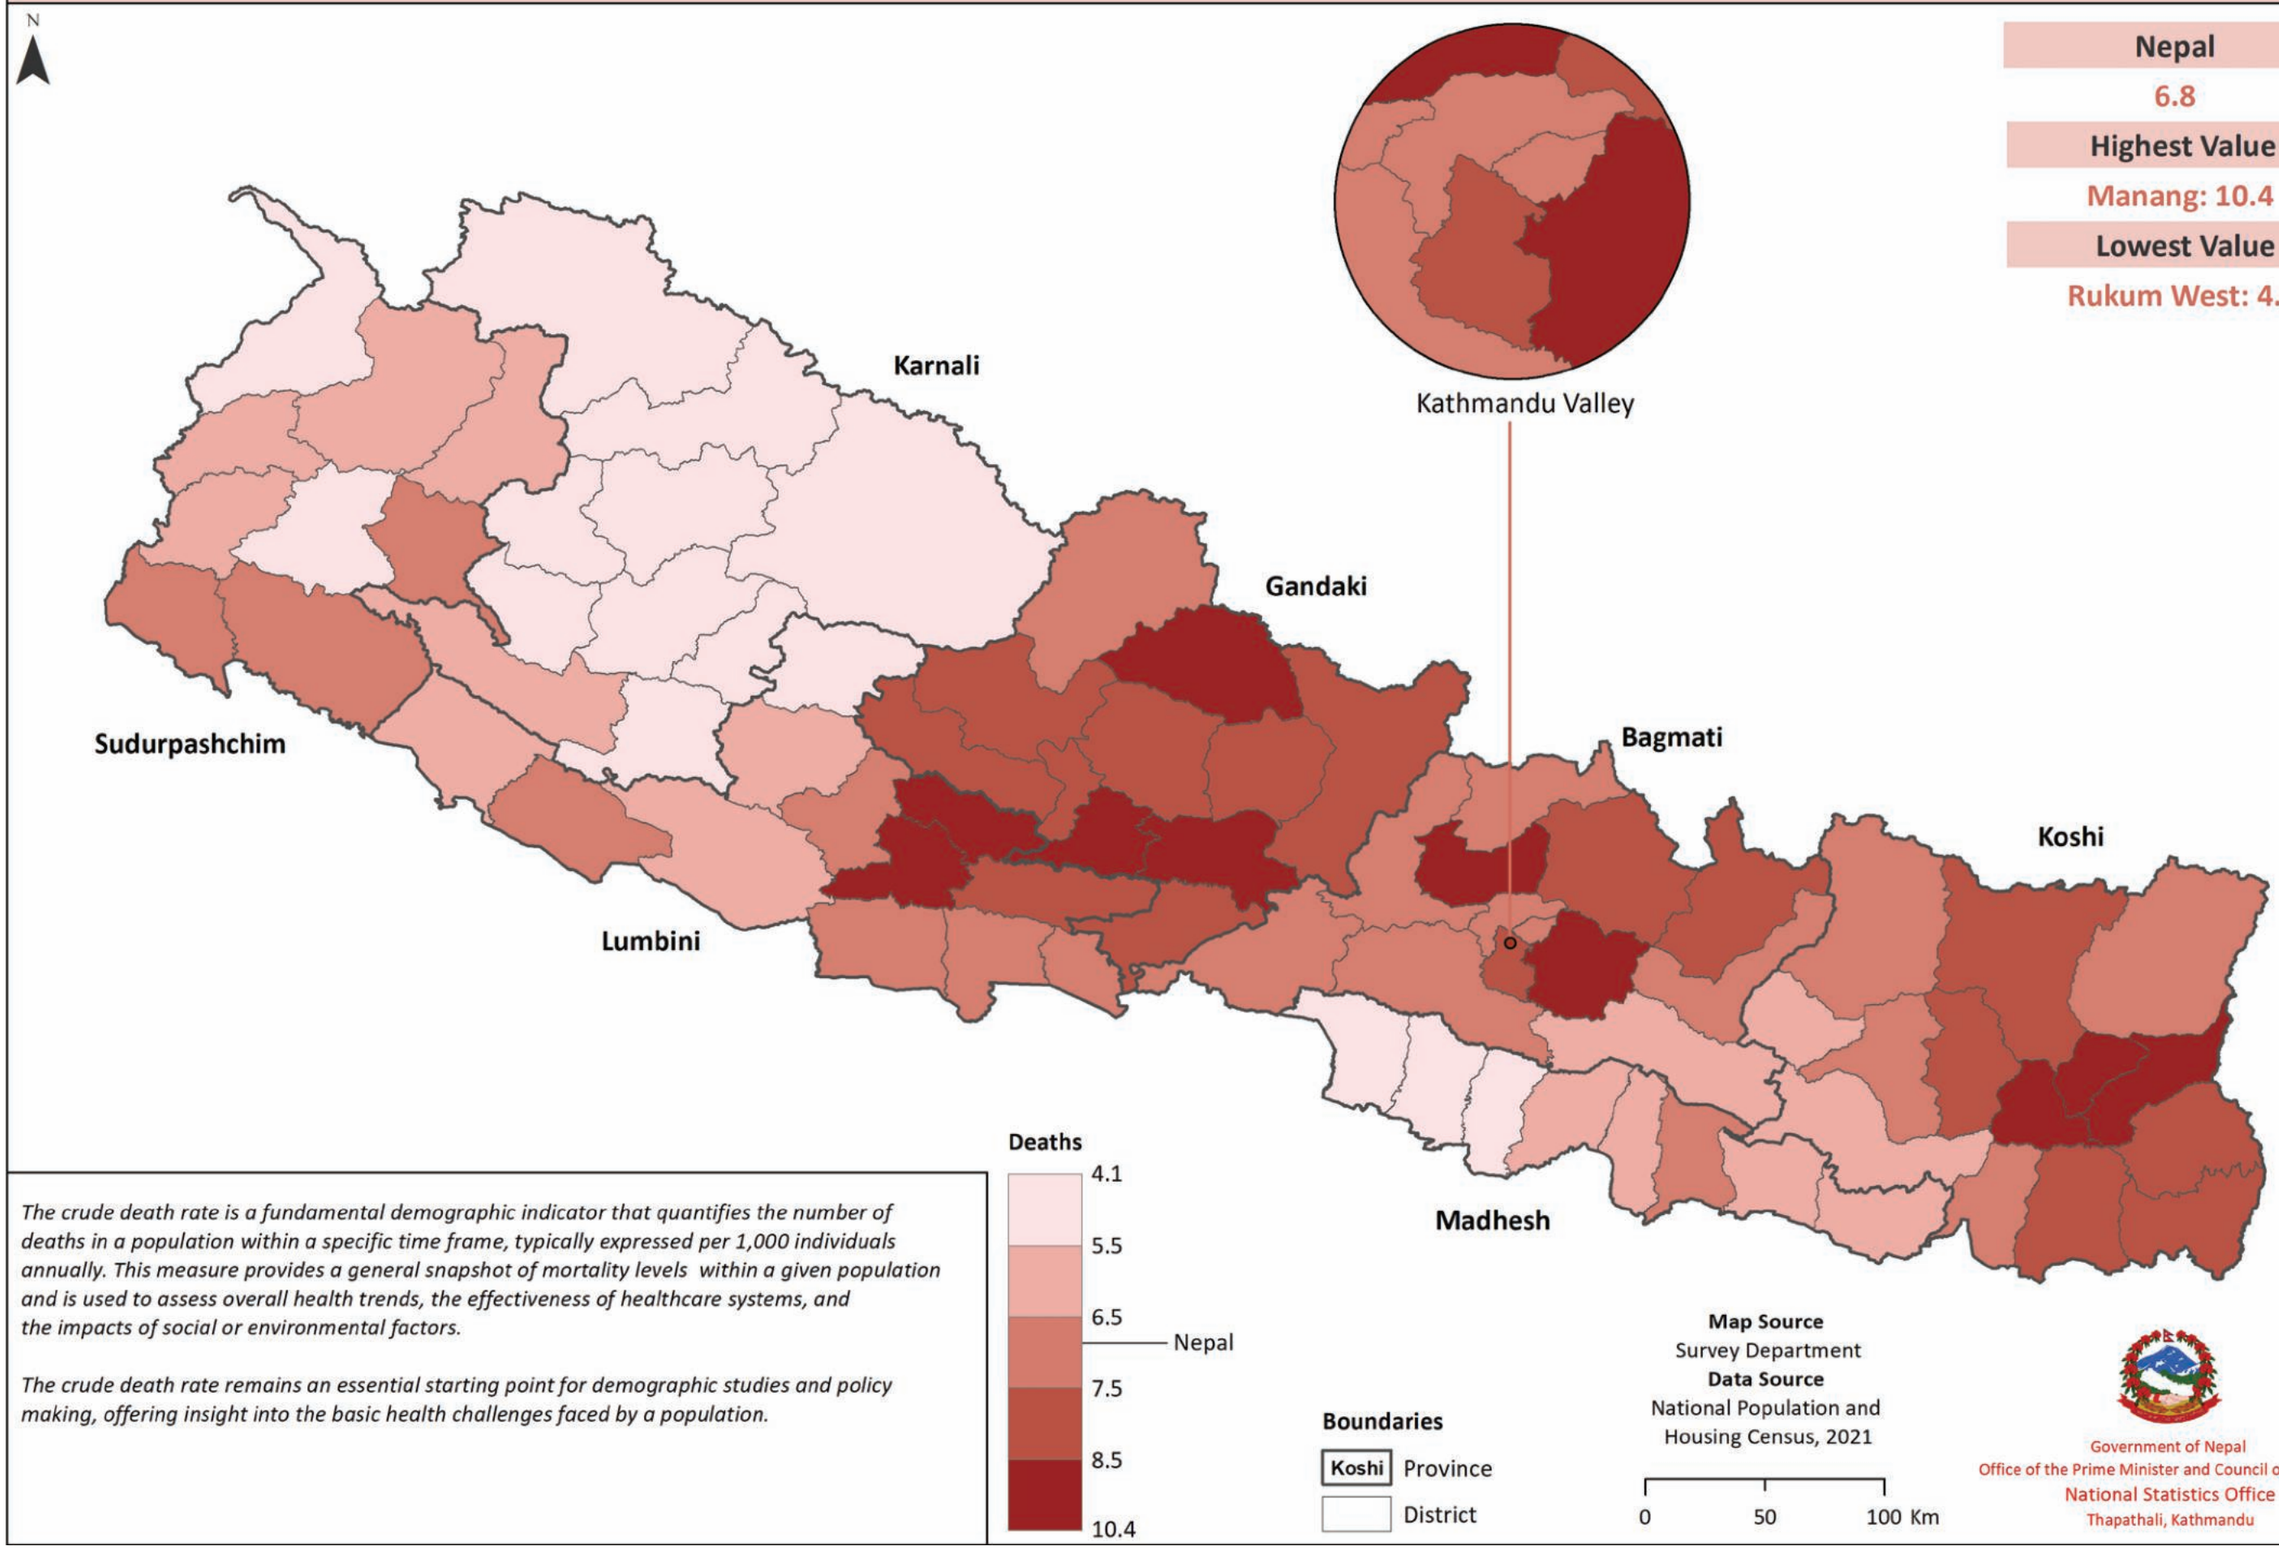

The indicator is calculated by dividing the number of deaths occurring during the 12 months prior to the census reference period by the mid-year population and multiplying by 1,000. It is expressed as the number of deaths per 1,000 population.

Crude Death Rate, by Local Level

The crude death rate is a fundamental demographic indicator that quantifies the number of deaths in a population within a specific time frame, typically expressed per 1,000 individuals annually. This measure provides a general snapshot of mortality levels within a given population and is used to assess overall health trends, the effectiveness of healthcare systems, and the impacts of social or environmental factors.

The crude death rate remains an essential starting point for demographic studies and policy making, offering insight into the basic health challenges faced by a population.

4.11 Infant Mortality Rate, by Local Level

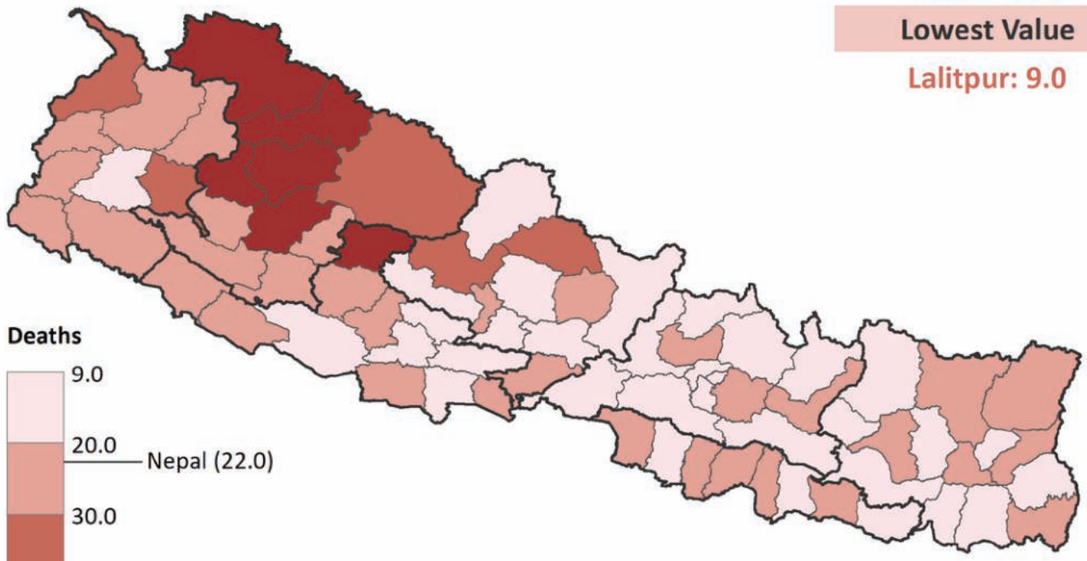

Infant Mortality Rate (IMR) is the number of infants who die before reaching one year of age per 1,000 live births in a local level during a specified period. It indicates the level of infant mortality in the local level.

The Infant Mortality Rate is calculated by dividing the number of deaths of infants aged less than one year by the total number of live births during the same period, and multiplying the result by 1,000.

4.12 Life Expectancy at Birth, by District

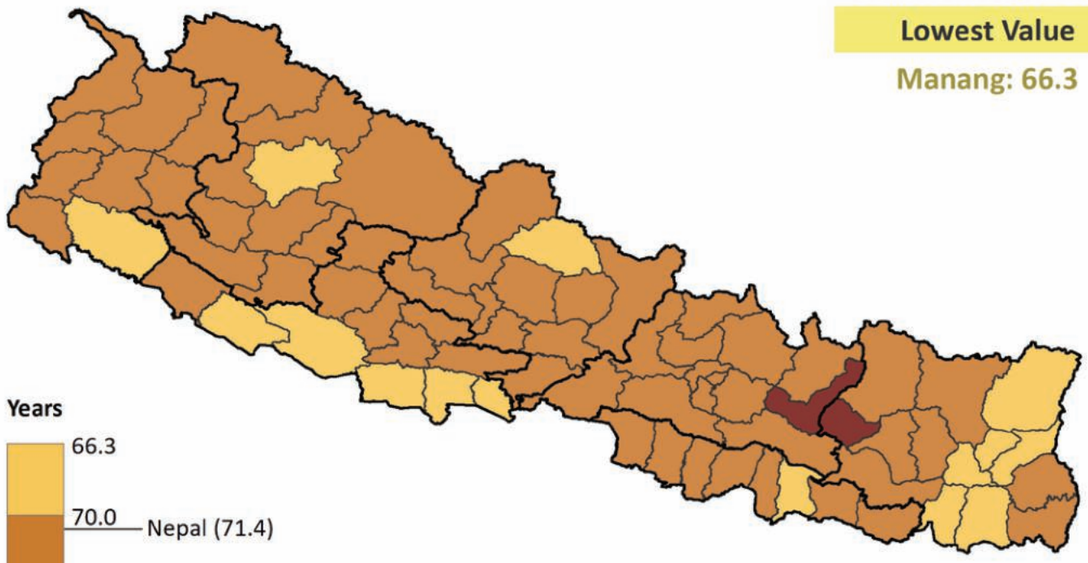

This indicator refers to the average number of years a newborn is expected to live, assuming that the age-specific mortality rates prevailing at the time of birth remain constant throughout the person's lifetime. It is a summary measure of the mortality conditions prevailing in the population of the respective district.

The indicator is estimated using a life table based on age-specific mortality rates for the population of the respective district. It is expressed as the expected number of years a newborn would live.

4.13 Demographic Dividend Index, by Local Level

This indicator refers to a composite measure of the demographic and socioeconomic conditions that influence the potential to achieve a demographic dividend within a local level. A demographic dividend arises from changes in population age structure, particularly an increase in the working-age population relative to the dependent population, often resulting from declining fertility and mortality.

The indicator is used to assess the potential for economic growth associated with increased productivity and a higher working-age population.

4.16 Child Mortality Rate, by Local Level

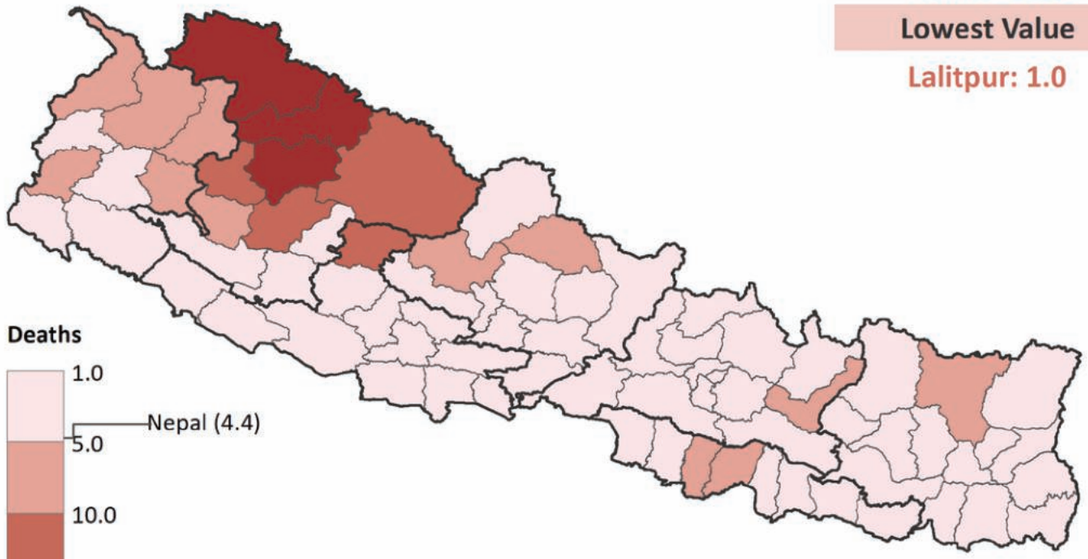

Child Mortality Rate is the number of children who die before reaching 5 years of age per 1,000 live births in a local level during a specified period. It shows the level of mortality among children under five years of age.

The Child Mortality Rate is calculated by dividing the number of deaths of children under 5 years of age by the total number of live births during the same period, and multiplying the result by 1,000.

5.11 Gender Gap in Labour Force Participation Rate, by Local Level

Gender Gap in Labour Force Participation Rate refers to the difference between the labour force participation rate of males and females in a local level. It shows the gap in participation in the labour force between men and women.

Calculation:
The gender gap is calculated by subtracting the female labour force participation rate from the male labour force participation rate in the same local level.
